APPRAISAL POLICY AND PROCESS 2017-2018

The Governing Body of Selly Oak Nursery School will ensure that the Government's Appraisal Regulations are implemented in this school in accordance with the principles set out in the following policy statement and appraisal process and having regard to the guidance issued by the local authority from time to time.

1 Purpose and commitment

- 1.1 The Governing Body accepts that the purpose of appraisal is to provide a clear and consistent assessment of the overall performance of teachers, including the Head Teacher, and for supporting their development within the context of the school's plan for improving educational provision and performance and the standards expected of teachers.
- 1.2 The Governors are committed to ensuring high quality and supportive performance appraisal aligned to their aims and objectives for the school and linked where appropriate to other policies and procedures and their duties under equality legislation.

2 Principles

- 2.1 Appraisal in this school should be a supportive and developmental process, designed to ensure that all teachers have the skills and support they need to perform their roles and responsibilities effectively. It should help to ensure that teachers are able to continue to improve their professional practice and development.
- 2.2 Appraisal should be based on the principles of
 - clarity of expectation
 - fairness and reasonableness
 - consistency
 - balance
 - enablement including supportive development
 - confidentiality
- 2.3 Teachers must know what is expected of them in order to support the School Development Plan as well as to benefit from the appraisal process.
- 2.4 The methods of assessment against standards and objectives should be fair, thorough and non-discriminatory. A variety of methods should be used and discussed with teachers in the school.
- 2.5 To ensure consistency any teacher to whom the appraisal of other teachers is delegated should be suitably prepared to discharge that responsibility, not only through knowledge of the appraisal regulations and process but also with the appropriate skills and confidence, whether by training within the school or by a suitable external organisation. Appraisers should be qualified teachers with relevant experience.
- 2.6 Consistency and balance should also be achieved by appropriate moderation and monitoring for quality assurance. The Head Teacher should report to the Governing Body annually on the appraisal process.

- 2.7 An assessment of a teacher's professional development needs and any action which should be taken to address them should be an integral part of the assessment and used to enable teachers to achieve their professional potential.
- 2.8 The records of each teacher's appraisal will be confidential. The use of information from appraisal reports to monitor fairness, inform the planning of professional development, ensure overall quality and report to the Governing Body should not compromise individual confidentiality.
- 2.9 If it becomes apparent during or at the end of the appraisal period that the teacher's overall performance is below accepted standards the Head Teacher should address the situation without delay, as described in the appraisal process, with a thorough assessment of the apparent deficiencies and possible causes (including any personal circumstances) and implement any necessary support. There should be a clear explanation to the teacher of what will happen if the necessary improvement does not take place.
- 2.10 Feedback will highlight particular areas of strength as well as any areas that need attention. Where there are concerns about any aspects of the teacher's performance the appraiser will meet the teacher formally to:
- give clear feedback to the teacher about the nature and seriousness of the concerns;
 - give the teacher the opportunity to comment and discuss the concerns;
 - agree any support (eg coaching, mentoring, structured observations), that will be provided to help address those specific concerns;
 - make clear how, and by when, the appraiser will review progress (it may be appropriate to revise objectives, and it will be necessary to allow sufficient time for improvement. The amount of time is up to the school but should reflect the seriousness of the concerns);
 - explain the implications and process if no - or insufficient - improvement is made.

When progress is reviewed, if the appraiser is satisfied that the teacher has made, or is making, sufficient improvement, the appraisal process will continue as normal, with any remaining issues continuing to be addressed through that process.

Transition to capability

If the appraiser is not satisfied with progress, the teacher will be notified in writing that the appraisal system will no longer apply and that their performance will be managed under the capability procedure, and will be invited to a formal capability meeting.

APPRAISAL PROCESS

The Governing Body has adopted the following process for implementing the Appraisal Regulations in this school.

Publication of the process

- 1.1 The Head Teacher will be responsible for publishing this process to all teachers in the school, together with the Teachers' Standards and any other standards to be used in accordance with the Appraisal Regulations. See Appendix 1. The Head Teacher will also be responsible for ensuring that the appraisal process is published to each teacher newly appointed to the school.

Committee for appraising the Head Teacher

- 1.2 The Governing Body will appoint a committee to appraise the Head Teacher and delegate to this committee the responsibility to appoint an external adviser for the purposes of providing it with advice and support in relation to the appraisal of the Head Teacher. It will expect the committee to choose an adviser who is suitably skilled and experienced, ideally someone who has leadership experience in a school in the same phase but is not personally connected with the Head Teacher.

The appraisal period

- 1.3 The Governing Body has agreed that there will be a common twelve-month appraisal period for teachers in this school and that it will run from 1 September to 31 August each year. The Governing Body has also agreed that in 2012 the old Performance Management Regulations will continue to apply to the performance management cycle started in 2011 until the completion of that cycle.

Allocation of appraisers

- 1.4 The Head Teacher will decide to whom to delegate the role of appraiser in respect of each teacher in the school and notify that decision to both the appraiser and the teacher. If a teacher is dissatisfied with the choice of appraiser he or she should explain those concerns to the Head Teacher, who, if he or she considers them to be valid, will appoint an alternative appraiser. If the appraiser is unable to conduct an appraisal (for example, due to sickness), the Head Teacher will appoint an alternative appraiser.
- 1.5 The Head Teacher may make representations to the committee of the Governing Body if he or she has valid concerns about the choice of external adviser and the committee may then appoint a different adviser.

Preparation

- 1.6 The Head Teacher will ensure that each appraiser is suitably prepared in accordance with the principles set out by the Governing Body and will ensure that the preparation includes discussion of moderation and quality assurance. The Head Teacher will also ensure that all teachers understand their own responsibilities and prepare for the first meeting, through self-reflection and evaluation of their own performance and development needs.

Meeting to start the appraisal process

- 1.7 Shortly before or after the start of the appraisal period the designated appraiser will meet with each teacher to consider objectives, the way in which those objectives are to be achieved, assessment criteria, the teacher's professional development needs and how they should be addressed. The appraiser will inform the teacher of the relevant standards against which the teacher's performance in that appraisal period will be assessed and the objectives which have been set for the teacher in respect of that period. A written statement will be provided including this information and the sources of evidence for assessment. The school may devise a form for the written statement if it wishes. The appraiser and the teacher will also agree arrangements for professional discussions during the appraisal period which may include a meeting for a review approximately midway through the appraisal process.

Collection of information and evidence

1.8 During the appraisal period monitoring through a range of work-related activities will be used to provide balanced information on the teacher's performance. These will include pupil progress data analysis and some of the following as evidence.

Action Plans / Planning / Moderating profiles / Reports to HT / Reports to Governing Body / Children's progress/attainment folders/Learning Journals / Profiles / Informal Learning Walks / Observations of other teachers /Having others observe you/ policies / SDP SEF / Evidence of Coaching /Evidence in leading training and staff meetings / Evidence of Mentoring / Analysis of Evaluation of Workshops

Observation

1.9 The means of assessment will include arrangements for observation, including the amount of observation, its purpose(s), any particular aspects of the teacher's work to be assessed during observation, its expected timing and duration, and who is likely to undertake the observation. Observation will be undertaken by people who have qualified teacher status, are adequately prepared and have the appropriate professional skills. It should be explained that if at any point during the appraisal cycle it is considered that the teacher needs or the teacher seeks extra support, additional observation may be arranged. The teacher will be notified of an observation in advance, although short visits to classrooms will not be specifically notified.

1.10 The appraiser will give oral comments to the teacher as soon as possible, preferably on the day of the observation and otherwise within one working day. The appraiser will follow this with a written report, including the date and duration of the observation and the lesson or task observed, within five working days of the observation. The teacher will be given the opportunity to add written comments to each report. The Head Teacher may at that stage ask to see for moderation purposes the information given to each teacher and the evidence used for assessment.

Revision meeting

1.11 If appropriate a 'revision meeting' can be requested by the appraiser or the teacher and, if appropriate, objectives can be changed or adjusted.

Preparation of the appraisal report

1.12 At the end of the appraisal period the appraiser will meet with the teacher to prepare the appraisal report.

1.13 The appraiser will give the teacher the appraisal report. The teacher may add comments. If there are no objections to the report the appraiser will forward it to the Head Teacher who will moderate the report and consider any recommendations for professional development and pay.

Review of appraisal report

1.14 If the teacher is dissatisfied with any aspect of the appraisal report that teacher should discuss the objection(s) with the appraiser. If that discussion does not resolve the objections the teacher may submit a written request to the Head Teacher to review the appraisal report. In cases when the Head Teacher is the appraiser the teacher may submit a written request to the clerk to the Governing Body for the appropriate committee (depending on the Governing Body's delegations) to review the appraisal report.

1.15 If the Head Teacher has any concerns about the appraisal report he or she will discuss it with the appraiser in the first instance. The Head Teacher will then decide whether any action is needed about the quality of the report or the performance of the teacher.

Performance below acceptable standards

1.16 If it becomes apparent during or at the end of the appraisal period that the teacher's overall performance is below acceptable standards the Head Teacher/Deputy will meet with the teacher to discuss the nature and level of the concerns. The Head Teacher will then confirm the content of the discussion in writing and give the teacher the opportunity to reflect on it before another meeting, arranged with adequate notice, to determine what increased support will be given to the teacher, the kind of improvement required, the period within which the improvement should take place, how improvement will be assessed and when the situation will be reviewed. The Head Teacher will explain to the teacher what is likely to happen if the required improvement is not achieved. A written record of this meeting will also be given to the teacher.

Confidential storage

1.17 Once appropriate actions have been taken on professional development and pay the Head Teacher will arrange for confidential storage of the report for a period of six years.

Head Teacher's report to Governing Body

1.18 The Head Teacher will use the information in the appraisal reports, with due regard to confidentiality, to prepare the annual report on appraisal for the Governing Body.

GUIDANCE TO SCHOOLS

1 Preparation for implementation

- 1.1 Head Teachers are recommended to involve teachers when preparing their advice to the Governing Body on the appraisal process for their school.
- 1.2 Pending the adoption of an appraisal process Head Teachers should ensure that teachers are thoroughly prepared for the new arrangements, particularly the new requirement for assessing performance against the new teacher standards, and are aware of their entitlements and responsibilities under the appraisal regulations. Head Teachers should be working with teachers to set aside time for group discussions.
- 1.3 In practice, in schools where performance has been managed well, teachers should not notice any change in the arrangements for managing their appraisal.

2 Consistency, clarity and fairness in practice

- 2.1 Schools should ensure that the whole process is fair, thorough and non-discriminatory.
- 2.2 For a fair process, teachers must be told clearly what is expected of them. This prevents mistaken assumptions.
- 2.3 Head Teachers should ensure that any teacher to whom the appraisal of other teachers is delegated is suitably prepared to discharge that responsibility, not only through knowledge of the appraisal regulations and process but also with the appropriate skills and confidence, whether by training within the school or by a suitable external organisation. Appraisers should be qualified teachers with relevant experience. Arrangements should take account of the provision in the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document that "A teacher with leadership and management responsibilities is entitled, so far as is reasonably practicable, to a reasonable amount of time during school sessions for the purpose of discharging those responsibilities."

3 Balanced assessment

- 3.1 The regulatory requirements for appraisal are far fewer than for the old performance management regulations. They make no reference to classroom observations or other methods of assessment; these are left to schools to determine as part of the process for the school. The model policies produced by the Department for Education and teachers' associations concentrate on classroom observation, whereas Birmingham has consistently and repeatedly advised that methods of assessment should draw on a variety of evidence. The Appraisal Regulations specify that assessment should be of the teacher's role and responsibilities, which will cover extra responsibilities for which teaching and learning responsibility payments are awarded or which belong to posts on the leadership spine.
- 3.2 Teachers should be consulted on the methods of assessment in the school, including the nature of the objectives set and the way in which their performance is assessed against the relevant standards and objectives. They should feel comfortable in discussing the process and assessment with their appraiser.
- 3.3 Head Teachers are advised to involve their teachers fully in discussing with them not only 'what a good job looks like' in relation to the new teacher standards but also 'what a good assessment of a teacher's performance looks like' and the various ways in which the quality of teaching and learning should be assessed. They should also be guided by the specification in the OFSTED framework for leadership and management to monitor the quality of teaching and learning.
- 3.4 An assessment should be fair, consistent, and supportive and based on clear expectations described at the beginning of the appraisal period. The methods of assessment should build on the good practice already established in schools. They should be formative and summative, relevant, proportionate, and based on strong evidence drawn from a balanced variety of sources, including planning and work scrutiny, observation and visits to classrooms, assessment data and information from surveys, school councils etc. It is expected that schools' systems and records are accurate and strong enough to provide sufficient valid evidence to support the appraisal process and outcomes. Teachers may also gather their own evidence. The appraisal report at the end an assessment, as a summative assessment of a formative process, should never be a surprise to the teacher.

- 3.5 Assessment of teachers against the prescribed standards should relate to the absolute standards required and not to years of experience or particular pay points on the main scale. There is no basis for this in the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document, nor will OFSTED inspectors enquire about stage which a teacher has reached in his or her career when making their own judgements about a teacher.

4 Objectives

- 4.1 Objectives should describe the essential outcomes of provision and performance required of the teacher, aligned to the current School Improvement Plan, the Teachers' Standards, and the individual teacher's job description. They should enable the teacher to focus on his or her particular contributions to overall school improvement and most urgent development needs, the addressing of which will benefit the pupils and support the teacher's career aspirations. Objectives should concentrate on pupil progress and achievement and the quality of learning and teaching. The fewer the objectives the easier it is to clarify priorities. Objectives set should be specific, measurable, achievable, realistic and time-bound, whether short-term or long-term, and appropriate to the teacher's role and responsibilities.

- 4.2 Examples of objectives might be

- Class teacher - Relevant, appropriate teaching strategies to be used to enable pupils in specified class/group to make the progress and meet the targets required in mathematics by May 2013 as identified and agreed through accurate assessment in September 2012.
- Class teacher - Increase knowledge and understanding of what constitutes 'higher order thinking skills' and apply this in geography lessons in year ___ to challenge the most able pupils and accelerate progress to target achievement
- Phase Leader -Use appropriate leadership and management strategies so that teachers in your phase currently identified as requiring improvement obtain the agreed pupil standards and targets in reading.

- 4.3 Objectives should have regard to what can reasonably be expected of that teacher consistent with the school's strategy for achieving a work/life balance for all teachers as required under the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document and any individual circumstances, such as a disability or part-time working, for which a reasonable adjustment should be considered. Appraisers and those being appraised should seek to agree individual objectives, with teachers having the opportunity to make written comments about their objectives. Each objective should include the sources of evidence by which achievement will be assessed; this should also have been discussed with the teacher.

- 4.4 Provision should be made for revision of objectives during the appraisal period should this be considered appropriate.

5 Observation

- 5.1 Observation, whether in lessons or in respect of work outside the classroom, is an important method of assessment which should be undertaken fairly and in a supportive way. It should be a confidential process of constructive engagement conducted with professionalism, integrity and courtesy, with an acknowledgement that unforeseen circumstances may from time to time affect a particular lesson or task, and resulting in a report which is objective, accurate and fair. It is recognised that in schools where performance management has been effective existing arrangements for observation have been adequate for the purposes of helping to assess teachers' performance, so the amount of lesson or task observation should not normally exceed previous levels. Between them the Head Teacher and the appraiser should be familiar enough with the teacher's work to be able to recognise the odd occasion when a lesson or task has not been as good as it would normally be and assure with confidence both the teacher and any inspector that the standard of the lesson or task in question was not typical. Arrangements for observation should be discussed with teachers and should be set out for them as part of the appraisal process. The arrangements for observation should be included in the appraisal process.

6 Enablement

6.1 The entitlement in the new regulations to an assessment of a teacher's professional development needs and any action which should be taken to address them should be an integral part of the appraisal.

7 Confidentiality

7.1 Confidentiality is essential to the effective operation of the appraisal process. Where it is necessary to share information with the Governing Body or senior management team for purposes such as planning professional development and quality assurance data will be presented with due regard to confidentiality. Teachers should be informed of any request to see the report on their individual appraisal.

8 Teachers dissatisfied with aspects of the appraisal process or report

8.1 Neither the Appraisal Regulations nor the model appraisal policy from the Department for Education make any reference to what should happen if a teacher is dissatisfied with any aspect of the appraisal process or report.

8.2 The model policy from ATL, NAHT and NUT provides for an appeal against any entries in the written appraisal report at the end of the appraisal process. The model policy from NASUWT provides for appeals at "specified points in the performance management process", including what the NASUWT calls the 'planning statement', which corresponds to the information which the Head Teacher is required to give to every teacher on the standards and objectives set for that teacher.

8.3 Although the Appraisal Regulations make no reference to appeals, the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document requires the Governing Body to "establish procedures for addressing teachers' grievances in relation to their pay in accordance with the ACAS Code of Practice". Where an appraisal report makes recommendations about pay - which it must do "where relevant under the Document" - teachers will have the right to raise grievances if they consider that the appraisal report has affected their pay. Birmingham's model pay policy makes separate provision for this.

8.4 Having regard to the principle of fairness, Birmingham's model process provides that teachers dissatisfied with their appraisal report for reasons not related to their pay should be able to make representations about the content of the appraisal report to the Head Teacher. If the Head Teacher is the appraiser, the teacher should be able to make representations to the appropriate committee of the Governing Body (in accordance with the Governing Body's delegations).

9 Performance below acceptable standards

9.1 The Appraisal Regulations are silent on what happens if the appraisal report shows that the teacher's performance is below acceptable standards. There is no mention of capability procedures in the Regulations.

9.2 The Government's model appraisal policy provides for 'transition to capability' if the appraiser is not satisfied with progress, preceded by a formal meeting to discuss the nature and seriousness of any concerns and agree any support to be provided to address those concerns and a subsequent review of progress.

9.3 The model policy from ATL, NAHT and NUT includes a section on teachers experiencing difficulties which are such that, if not rectified, could lead to capability procedures. That section makes provision for support for such teachers and a "transition meeting to determine whether formal capability proceedings need to be commenced or the appraisal process remains in place".

9.4 The NASUWT model policy states that "The performance management process will not be used as a substitute for the informal stage of the capability procedure."

9.5 Birmingham's model appraisal process includes a section on what should happen if at any point in the appraisal period it appears that the teacher's performance is below acceptable standards.

10 Capability procedure

10.1 The School Staffing Regulations require Governing bodies of maintained schools to establish procedures for dealing with lack of capability on the part of staff at the school.

10.2 Following discussions with the teachers' associations the authority recommends that an appraisal policy should be separate from capability procedures. Any school which may be considering adoption of the Government's model appraisal policy is advised to omit the paragraphs which commit the Governing Body to adopting the Government's model capability procedure. The authority has stated that it will discuss capability procedures with the teachers' associations locally. In the meantime the Governing Body's existing capability procedures should continue in use; they are based on statutory guidance which remains in force until 1st September, 2012.

10.3 The current model capability procedure provides for its use "if a teacher fails, on a regular basis, to perform his or her duties to an acceptable professional standard in accordance with the duties set out in the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document." The reference to professional standards matches the new provision in the Appraisal Regulations for appraisal against the national standards.

10.4 In all cases of employee capability Head Teachers should take early advice from Employee Relations. The City Council meets the costs of successful claims to an employment tribunal in respect of maintained schools (i.e. excluding academies and free schools), subject to the appropriate policies and procedures having been followed, the presence of a City Council representative at all stages when dismissal is under consideration and the authority's advice having been followed. Otherwise any such costs will be charged to the school's budget share.

11 Other policies and procedures

11.1 Part two of the new teachers' standards deals with 'personal and professional conduct'. Head Teachers will consider whether inappropriate personal or professional conduct can be managed informally or should be investigated as potential misconduct under the school's disciplinary procedure.
